What is Blended Learning?

Blended learning is a voluntary option offered on a limited basis for high school students within Irvine Unified School District. Students complete coursework online, and attend one in-person meeting per week for discussions, activities, and test proctoring. Blended learning courses are aligned to relevant state standards and are of equivalent instructional minutes and rigor as the in-person course option.

Mandatory, in-person meetings will be held each week at a designated location (Creekside Education Center or another appropriate school site). Additionally, there will be one web conference per week, to be scheduled by the instructor. Relevant courses are A-G approved for the University of California through San Joaquin High School. San Joaquin High School is an approved program through NCAA, the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

How Can I Enroll in a Blended Learning Course?

Speak to your counselor and parent or guardian to determine if blended learning is an option for you. If you are interested in taking a blended learning course, you will need a referral from your counselor. Students and parents in the blended learning program must agree to the expectations, which include attendance and progress requirements. In general, successful students in a blended learning program are self-motivated and have excellent time management skills. They communicate with their instructors frequently, and attend in-person meetings as scheduled.
